Figure 1 is a line graph showing the change in Threatcon scores for Charlie and Delta over time. The Y-axis represents Threatcon scores from 0 to 115. The X-axis represents time points from Baseline to 100. Charlie's score starts at 115 and decreases to 60. Delta's score starts at 115 and decreases to 80%.

- > simultaneously press in the bottom of the ball latch B and pull the charging handle C back as far as it will go;
- > return the charging handle C until it locks, and then remove pressure from the ball latch;
- > insert the magazine D in the receiver E ahead of the trigger guard, ensuring that the magazine catch F looks in place;
- > press in the top of the ball latch B, allowing the ball and ball-socket to come forward and chamber a round;
- > rotate the safety catch to FIRE;
- > lose aim and squeeze the trigger B.

The gun will reload automatically. When the magazine is empty, the ball will remain open:

- > remove the empty magazine D by pressing the magazine-release catch

- > Insert a new magazine.
- > press the top part of the bolt catch B.

This allows the breech to close, chambering a round, and the gun is cocked ready to fire. To clean the gun:

- > set the safety catch to SAFE;
- > retract the charging handle C, while pushing it on the bottom of the bolt latch B, and reverse the charging handle open;
- > remove the magazine D;
- > release the charging handle C, together with the bolt and bolt-catch, by pushing in the top portion of the bolt latch.

The magazine can then be emptied or replaced.

Note: If the bolt fails to close properly, which usually indicates that the action needs cleaning, the bolt-assist H, absent from early AR 15s and M16 rifles, can be used to force the bolt-head into its locking recesses.
